TEACHERS KNOW TRAVEL MATTERS FOR STUDENTS.

Many teachers have witnessed first-hand how student travel has built self-esteem, independence, tolerance and cultural understanding, and celebrate it for breaking down barriers to a student's personal, educational and social development.

In research from the Student & Youth Travel Association (SYTA), teachers report how travel impacts students in many ways:

BOOSTS CLASSROOM INSTRUCTION.

Student travel enhances and reinforces classroom instruction with practical, hands-on experiences. 45% of teachers claim it is extremely effective compared to classroom instruction.

EXPANDS SOCIAL SKILLS.

The social impact of travel on students is enormous. 74% of teachers believe travel has a very positive impact on students' personal development.

PROPELS FUTURE LEARNING.

Travel boosts students' motivation for further education and knowledge. 60% of teachers report students who travel have an increased willingness to learn and explore.

CHANGES LIVES.

The transformative power of travel is often unexpected but always treasured. As many as 68% of teachers report travel as a "life changing" experience for their students.
